"The Disadvantages of City Boys."
Some months ago, Rev. Washington Gladden, of Springfield, Mass., believing that if he could find out how the active and prominent men of his own city spent their boyhood, it would help to solve the problem of what is the best training for boys, prepared the following circular, which was sent to the one hundred men who could fairly be said to stand at the head of the financial, commercial, professional and educational interests of the city.
"My Dear Sir:—I desire to find out for the benefit of the boys, how the leading men of this city spent their boyhood. Will you be kind enough to tell me:
"1. Whether your home during the first fifteen years of your life was on a farm, in a village, or in a city, and
"2. Whether you were accustomed, during any period, to engage in any kind of work when you were not in school?
"I should be glad, of course, to have you go into particulars as fully as you are disposed to do; but I do not wish to tax your patience, and I shall be greatly obliged for a simple answer to these two questions."
No less than eighty-eight of the busy gentlemen who received this circular were kind enough to answer the questions, some of them briefly, most of them quite fully, and it turned out that few had been brought up like most of the boys who crowd the ball-grounds and fill the streets of our cities in these later days. Here is a brief summary of the returns:
Of these eighty-eight men, twelve spent the first fifteen years of their life in the city, twelve in villages, and sixty-four were farmers' boys.
But of the twenty-four who lived in villages and cities, six were practically farmers' boys, for they lived in small villages, or on the outskirts of cities, and had the same kind of work to do that farmers' boys have. One of these village boys said:
"I learned to hoe, dig and mow; in fact, I was obliged to work, whether I liked it or no. In winter I went to school, and worked nights and mornings for my board."
Another said: "I used to work away from home some on a farm in the summer and fall. In the winter, when going to school, we three boys used to work up the wood for winter use."
Four others told substantially the same story. As these were about the same as farmers' boys, we may add them to that list, so that seventy out of eighty-eight, almost four-fifths of all these men, had the training of farm life.
Now how was it with the eighteen city and village boys on the list? Did they have an easy time of it? Five of them did, as they testified; five of them had no work in particular to do, but one of the five says that he studied law when out of school, and that was not exactly play. The rest of the eighteen were poor boys, not paupers, by any means, but children of the humble classes, many of them in narrow and needy circumstances, and though they lived in cities or villages, they were accustomed from their earliest years to hard work.
"Was generally employed," says one, "during the summer months, and in vacations, in doing any kind of work that offered."
Four of the city boys were news-boys. One of them says: "The last year I was connected with the press, I earned one hundred dollars before breakfast."
Another: "I have paid my own way since eight years of age, without any assistance except my board from my mother's table."
Of all these eighty-eight boys, five only had nothing particular to do.
While these boys were growing and working, a great many others, sons of merchants and lawyers, were growing up in Springfield, going to school and amusing themselves, as boys of their class are apt to do. Where are they? Only five of this class are heard from among the eighty-eight solid men of this city. Some of them, perhaps, are prosperous men in other cities, but the number can not be large, for in Springfield only five men out of eighty-eight came from this class. Ninety-four and a half percent, were either farmers' boys or poor and hard-working town-boys.
Mr. Gladden made his report to the public of Springfield, in the form of a lecture. The more announcement of the subject alone crowded the church, which is a large one, and the interest in the lecture was so great that the Mayor and several of the representative citizens requested a repetition in the Music Hall. When this came off, the hall was packed and hundreds went away from the doors unable to gain entrance.
Mr. Gladden has rewritten the lecture, and his interesting facts and logical deductions will appear
